

NEW NOVEL GIVES UNEXPECTED VIEW OF SUMMER CAMP

Author Eldot dares to tell the inside story at last

Portland OR, April 7, 2011-- Eldot, a longtime Portland resident, has launched his five novel series Little J and Roger in electronic book form. Barr's Meadow is the first in the set. It was first published in February at the e-Book service, Smashwords, where is available for sampling and purchase. [<http://www.smashwords.com/books/view/40718>]

Many stories about scout camp have been written and told, but this one is special. Character driven, adventurous, and explicit, it tells about these essential steps in life with a cheerful ‘Ooo: why not?’ attitude. The books aren’t naughty, they are just honest—as well as entertaining. Of course, that makes them Adult Reading.

This story about love and discovery is not the usual coming of age drama. This one begins at the top and keeps going. A lot of boys frolic, experiment, and discover wonderful things. There are surprises and lots of fulfilled expectations. Very fulfilled. Naturally, most of these are not “approved” activities. They take place during free time and after hours. A couple of love stories are given the room to develop into what will become lasting, lifelong relationships. Several others have that potential. There are over six hundred boys in the two week camp, and the five novel series takes full advantage of the resource.

About Eldot, the author: Eldot, a simple cipher, is a nom de plume. Persons who need to know the author’s name can discover it easily enough should they wish to utilize the tools available on the internet. No one can be truly anonymous these days.

The novels are not autobiographical, but gaining a sense of who has written them is a fair expectation. Eldot is retired; he’s lived in the Pacific Northwest most of his life. Mother Nature has been kind to him in most respects. The illusion in his mind that he is still in his thirties persists—if only his carcass would cooperate. But his physician happily reports that he is easily fifteen years younger than the calendar reports, so there’s still time for play.

Little J and Roger is his first venture into published fiction. Lots of urging and pushing by friends and relatives was the driver, not any need or ambition to be in print. But it has been great fun. If it is well received, he might do another. More about Eldot is available on his web page at diphra.com
